ShelterBox - Philippines - Typhoon Haiyan 2014

EMERGENCY: SUPER TYPHOON IN THE PHILIPPINES

Also known as Ompong in the Philippines, Typhoon Mangkhut's ferocity is equivalent to that of a Category 5 Atlantic Hurricane. Its high winds and torrential rains could cause major damage to thousands of homes across the region.

OUR RESPONSE TEAM

The ShelterBox Response Team is on the way to help families who might lose everything. We are already speaking with our Rotary contacts in the area to understand how we can help quickly.

OUR AID

We have enough shelter aid stored locally in the Philippines to help 2,000 families. There are many reports predicting a severe humanitarian impact.

YOUR SUPPORT

You can send the aid families need. Weatherproof family tents, practical tools to dig out homes, solar lights to combat power cuts and clean water kits to stop deadly diseases. To donate, please follow this link.

ShelterBox - Philippines - Typhoon Haiyan 2014

SHELTERBOX IS ON RED ALERT FOR A POWERFUL TYPHOON

Millions of people in the Philippines are living in the path of this destructive storm, including those who have been displaced several times due to the monsoon rains last July and August.

The Philippines is one of the world's worst disaster-affected countries. We have responded there 24 times in 13 years - more frequently than any other country.

Typhoon Mangkhut is being compared to a Category 5 Atlantic Hurricane - the highest possible category, with the highest level of emergency alerts being issued. This storm is expected to cause damage and devastation similar to Typhoon Haiyan, a storm that struck the Philippines in 2013 and was one of the strongest storms ever recorded killing.

The incoming high winds and torrential rains could cause widespread damage to thousands of homes across the region.

Our teams are on the way to help families at risk of losing everything. We're already speaking with our Rotary contacts in the area to understand how we can help as quickly as possible.
